Introduction

StudyPortals Analytics and Consulting Team (ACT) helps universities and other institutions in the higher education sector realise their ambitions in the field of international marketing and international student recruitment. Our team of highly-experienced consultants and associates advises and assists on everything from strategy, branding and marketing to customer relationship management, student recruitment, market insight, competitor analysis, Google Analytics and professional development training. This document gives an overview of the professional development training we are currently offering, through either open registration or in a tailored, in-house format.

StudyPortals is the global education choice platform. Our mission is to empower the world to choose education, while making your international higher education marketing easier and more effective. Over 19 million users from 240 countries worldwide use our portals each year to look at over 114,000 programmes from more than 2,450 universities in 120 countries. This allows us to develop best practices from all over the world that we apply to help our clients.

Available training and workshops

StudyPortals ACT provides open registration or tailored, in-house, professional development training and workshops in almost any field of international marketing and student recruitment. Our vast, global network of trainers has experience in all relevant fields. Pages 5 to 15 cover each of the currently available workshops in turn.

Almost all our workshops are designed for either 1 or 2 days, according to your needs, and can be offered at different levels. Most workshops and trainings involve two trainers. The maximum group size per workshop is 25 participants, except for the one on Google Analytics, which has a maximum capacity of 10 participants.

Introduction to international marketing & recruitment

There are many good reasons for recruiting international students, including income generation, international recognition and branding, as well as strategic, cultural, economic, political and educational alliances. However, international recruitment can potentially be a minefield if you don't have a clear idea of how to go about it. This course aims to give international officers and academic colleagues an introduction to entering markets, international recruitment and promotions. It also offers advice on strategic planning and models for success in this field.

Topics include

- Trends and developments in international education
- Services marketing
- How to make a marketing plan
- Internal marketing and communication
- Marketing audit and swot analysis
- Marketing channels

Learning outcomes

- The basic principles of international marketing & recruitment
- Trends and developments in the global market place
- The principles of positioning and branding

From enquiries to enrolment

In today's competitive education environment, international marketing & recruitment is becoming increasingly important to universities across the globe. The reality, however, is that most universities are doing very little marketing but a lot of recruiting, which in fact is nothing more than sales! And not sales in the sense of car dealers or evening phone calls from telesales people, because selling education does not even come close to that; many students proactively contact the university with an enquiry. We believe that proper sales skills are essential for all staff involved in student recruitment.

This workshop will focus on the marketing and sales skills you require to successfully help students make the right decision, such as speed to contact, listening and questioning skills, objection handling and closing the deal.

Topics include

- Services marketing and service quality and sales
- Foundations of consultative selling and how to help international students
- Lead management and recruitment forecasting
- On and offline leads generation
- Best practices in student recruitment: using webinars to recruit students

Learning outcomes

- The importance of services marketing
- The relevance of service quality in the sales process
- The various stages of the sales process in international student recruitment
- The importance of speed to contact, of listening, questioning, objection handling and of closing the deal

Strategic marketing

The marketing of higher education to domestic and international students is often regarded as a mainstream activity. However, developing a marketing strategy that enables you to capture the interest of prospective students thousands of kilometres from your home campus is a complex and often costly exercise. One that many institutions agonise over and have significant difficulties in framing the 'right' strategy.

This workshop will focus on the 'strategic why' of international marketing and provide policy makers and recruiters with a solid theoretical background. This is supplemented by practical examples to help you determine the best strategies and methods of implementing.

Topics include

- Strategy in the context of international education
- The impact global trends in international student recruitment and the mobility of students has on the development of your marketing activities
- Strategic choices in international markets: determining where your students will come from
- The role of technology: digital strategy and online marketing
- Alternative strategies for international student recruitment

Learning outcomes

- What strategic marketing means and how it impacts international student recruitment at their institution
- The importance of market research, marketing audits and tracking market developments
- The strategic importance of conversion strategies
- The full range of marketing activities and how they are likely to impact student recruitment

Branding higher education institutions

The role branding plays in higher education is increasing significantly. Universities and colleges compete for the attention of domestic and international students just as other service industries do. Issues like visibility, loyalty and reputation have therefore become more important in recent years. In addition, with an increasing number of universities having to charge (full-cost) tuition fees, branding and positioning have become much more central in their marketing activities. This course offers an overview of the key aspects of branding, while demonstrating that a strong brand is essential in the increasingly competitive higher education environment.

Topics include

- Introduction to brand theory
- Association networks
- Developing an education brand
- Developing your own brand
- Lessons from the corporate world
- Online branding

Learning outcomes

- Recognise the elements of brand theory most useful and relevant to your institutional context
- Understand the importance of speed to contact, of listening, questioning, objection handling and of closing the deal
- Identify the potential role of a brand in education marketing
- Identify the internal steps needed in building your institution's brand
- Identify a potential brand position for the institution in either the national or international market
- Recognise valuable and relevant lessons from the world of commercial branding

Google Analytics for higher education 101 - beginners

Online marketing is becoming increasingly important. Not only is it highly effective; it is also highly measurable. The reality, however, is that most marketers and recruiters do not always have access to their institution's Google Analytics, or know how to use it effectively for tracking visitors to and through their website.

This workshop will focus on the importance of Google Analytics for international marketing and recruitment. It combines solid background information with practical examples of how to effectively analyse and apply web statistics.

Topics include

- Introduction to the marketing funnel and conversion rates
- Return on investment (ROI) and online marketing
- Introduction: referral traffic, bounce rate and other terminology
- The limits and benefits of online metrics in Google Analytics
- Setting up views showing region breakdown per source/campaign
- Setting up segments to measure conversion
- Analysing the conversion rate of visitors to your website into enrolled students

Learning outcomes

- Understand the importance of online metrics
- Understand conversion rates and the cost effectiveness of their activities
- Analyse the behaviour of visitors to your university's website
- See country breakdowns of your marketing channels in Google Analytics
- Define and measure conversion rates of visitors
- Assess online campaigns based on conversion towards an enrolled student
- Improve a website to be able to track a student until enrolment

Google Analytics for higher education 201 - advanced

This workshop is intended for those who already have a basic understanding of Google Analytics but who want to go deeper and learn more about how this powerful tool can help drive successful international recruitment.

Topics include

- Introduction to Google Analytics advanced: events and goals
- Regular expressions
- Multi-channel tracking
- Cross/sub-domain tracking
- Source-student/CRM connection set-up possibilities
- Introduction to Google Tag Manager for non-IT people and to Universal Analytics

Learning outcomes

- Better understand Google Analytics and dive deeper into statistics/conversion
- See how students find your website and which/how many other websites they visit before they make a decision
- Use Google Tag Manager without IT support
- Have deeper insight into how to connect the dots between students who have applied and their starting point
- Track between two different internal websites like apply.university.com and www.university.com
- Improve conversion tracking with events and goals

Return on investment of your marketing activities

Given recent austerity initiatives, higher education institutions have become more budget-conscious than ever. The effectiveness of marketing and recruitment must be evaluated so that maximum enrolment effect can be achieved from limited budgets. This workshop will give you practical guidance on how to measure and compare the costs and benefits of the most frequently-used marketing channels: agents, education fairs and advertising (offline and online). You'll learn business principles of cost accounting and work in groups to uncover the hidden costs of various marketing efforts and to calculate return on investment (ROI).

Topics include

- Introduction to the marketing funnel
- ROI of education fairs
- ROI of agents
- ROI of online marketing

Learning outcomes

- Have gained practical guidance on how to measure the effect of agents, education fairs and online marketing
- Have learned how to analyse and improve the marketing mix and conversions in the process
- Understand the recruitment funnel and the principles of calculating ROI

Working with agents

In the increasingly competitive global marketplace for international students, the need to offer a more local and personal service often makes the difference between converting an application to a registration. Education agents are now central to the strategies of many universities and colleges around the world, despite considerable unease amongst some institutions towards using such direct commercial means. Yet the reality is that agents often provide an excellent and cost-effective way of recruiting students.

Topics include

- Understanding how agents work and what they can do for you
- Selecting an agent; distinguishing the good from the bad
- Making the most of your agreement
- Legal considerations when appointing agents
- Training agents to support your recruitment strategies
- Good practice in institutional support; what agents need most from you
- Rewards, incentives and commissions

Learning outcomes

- Confidently select a reputable agent to represent your institution
- Deal with the legal and ethical issues of appointing agents
- Draft an appropriate contract for agents
- Support any agents appointed
- Agree a method of payment that best suits your institution

Intercultural management and the international campus

This workshop aims to help higher education institutions become a truly welcoming place for international students. Increasing numbers of universities across the world want to be - and claim to be - international. More often than not this raises false expectations amongst (prospective) international students, as most universities do not or cannot deliver on this promise. To this end, the concepts of services marketing and service quality will be explored, as international student satisfaction depends largely on the quality of service provided.

Topics include

- Introduction to services marketing
- Discussion on the quality of service provision and student satisfaction
- Service quality
- Preparing the campus for the arrival of international students; how to make your campus (more) international and welcoming
- Caring for international students through student services; an overview of student services and care programmes. What organisational set up is needed and who is responsible?

Learning outcomes

- The basic principles of services marketing
- The basic principles of service quality and student satisfaction
- How to make their institution more international and welcoming to international students and staff
- How to care better for international students

Online marketing

Nowadays, to successfully recruit international students you have to carry out online marketing. The students you are trying to recruit probably spend most of their time online using Google, Facebook, Instagram, Snapchat and YouTube. Having a good website and knowing how to generate traffic and convert leads is crucial to anything you do, even offline. This workshop will offer you the latest insights in online marketing.

Topics include

- Website is the key – how to design your website for best conversion
- Tracking of results (intro)
- Google Adwords campaigns, do's and don'ts
- When and for what to use Facebook (social media)
- Student engagement with online marketing
- Multichannel and multi device usage

Learning outcomes

- The principles of online marketing
- How to use social media in your marketing mix
- What a website with good conversion rates looks like

Writing English for international student recruitment and marketing

This workshop aims to help higher education institutions become a truly welcoming place for international students. Increasing numbers of universities across the world want to be - and claim to be - international. More often than not, this raises false expectations amongst (prospective) international students, as most universities do not or cannot deliver on this promise. To this end, the concepts of service marketing and services quality will be explored, as international student satisfaction depends largely on the quality of service provided.

Topics include

- Eliminating common errors that could negatively impact marketing and recruitment activities
- Making a more professional impression with your written English
- Less is often more; learning how to write more succinctly
- Using text to support and reinforce your university/s branding
- Appealing to different target audiences (e.g. students, parents, peers)

Learning outcomes

- Better structure articles, texts and other stories used to recruit students or market services
- Define exactly which area of the international student market they want to address, and then adjust the tone and content of their text accordingly to create greater impact
- Write English with increased confidence and purpose
- Bring more imagination and dynamism to their writing so as to create a competitive advantage
- Use written English as a mean of reinforcing and communicating your institution's values

Target audience

The background of participants who take part in our workshops varies per subject. But generally speaking, most participants are university or college staff with one or more of the following responsibilities:

- (Inter)national marketing & recruitment
- Student recruitment
- Admissions & enrolment
- Corporate communications
- Internal communications
- International relations
- Marketing and communications
- Online marketing
- Business development
- Corporate liaison
- Corporate branding

Our trainers

The workshops are carried out by our team of highly-experienced trainers, depending on the topic and availability.

Thijs van Vugt

Thijs van Vugt is Director Analytics and Consulting at StudyPortals. He has over 25 years of experience in international education. He has worked at universities in the Netherlands and the UK. He also worked for the ERASMUS Bureau in Brussels.

From 2006 until 2009 Thijs was partner and director of StudyWorld (Netherlands) BV, a student recruitment agency and IELTS Testing Centre in the Netherlands. He was also the Interim Head of Marketing, Communication and Admissions of the Institute for Housing and Urban Development Studies of Erasmus University Rotterdam and head of marketing for RNTC. From July 2011 until September 2015 he was Senior Account Manager at StudyPortals.

Thijs is the founder of the Professional Section on Marketing & Recruitment of the European Association for International Education (EAIE) and was Chair of M&R from 2002 to 2008. In September 2009, Thijs was awarded the Bo Gregersen Award for Best Practice of the EAIE.

Preben Sperling

Preben Sperling has over 20 years' experience in international sales, business and market development. Originally from Denmark, Preben spent 15 years in the United States working in various manufacturing industries. There he developed multiple domestic and international sales channels with a strong consumer focus.

He brought his commercial experience to the education industry in 2006 when he joined Laureate Online Education. He performed various sales and business development roles within the Laureate network of for-profit universities and partners. He grew the University of Liverpool online, as well as expanded Walden University internationally through new partnerships and go-to-market strategies.

Preben co-founded Providentiae in 2013 to consult, train and offer student recruitment services to universities worldwide. He advocates student-centric recruitment and admission by adapting proactive sales and marketing techniques traditionally used in commercial companies.

Preben holds a BSc in Marine Biology from the University of Copenhagen and a postgraduate diploma in Business Administration from the University of Liverpool.

Tim Rogers

Tim Rogers is currently the Vice President of Enrolment Management at The American University of Paris. He additionally runs his own consultancy, International Higher Education Consultants UK Ltd, working all over the world on issues broadly related to student recruitment, internationalisation and higher education marketing. He has degrees from the Universities of Hull and Westminster and has also studied at the University of Kansas.

Over the last 15 years, Tim has worked with ministries of education and associated bodies in Denmark, Finland, New Zealand, Sweden and The Netherlands. He's teamed up with institutions such as LSE, Imperial College London, the Helsinki Education and Research Area, plus universities in Aarhus, Auckland Coventry, Maastricht, Oulu, Reading, Sussex and Utrecht. And he's been involved with organisations including i-graduate, Hobsons UK, Quacquarelli Symonds, NAFSA, ACA and the European Association of International Education (EAIE). Tim has a wide knowledge of how international developments affect numerous sectors of education, from boarding schools through public and private tertiary education providers to government-level ministries.

Benedikt Wirmer

Benedikt joined StudyPortals as a part-timer in 2011 and was ever since responsible for a variety of interdisciplinary tasks and projects. In 2014 he started working full-time for StudyPortals, leading several IT- and Analytics-related projects and innovating some of StudyPortals' products and services.

Since 2016 he is consulting universities in the areas of market research, tracking and analytics. He is expert in Google Analytics and Google Tag Manager and has, thanks to his web development skills, profound experience in providing tailored custom IT solutions as well.

He has 10+ years of experience in online marketing and delivered 200+ hours of trainings, of which many took place in an international setting. He studied and conducted research in Germany, Turkey, the Netherlands, India and Malawi and holds a B.Sc. in Industrial Engineering from Paderborn University and a Master's degree in Innovation Sciences from Eindhoven Technical University.

Derek Brookman

Derek Brookman has over 25 years' experience as a freelance writer, presenter and communications consultant.

He has written and presented workshops on effective professional writing to students as well as business audiences. Over the past three years he has been instrumental in writing the guidelines for communicating the Philips brand worldwide. Derek also recently completed his first book: a business novel describing an extraordinary, unconventional approach to personal and professional development.

He has frequently appeared live on BBC Radio Scotland as a correspondent and has also been working for UEFA since 2005 as an international football reporter. He has also presented – to live audiences and also on camera – at exhibitions across the world on behalf of various clients.

Derek graduated from the University of the West of Scotland with a BSc in electrical and electronic engineering, and has since followed courses on creative writing and investigative journalism. He is a member of the Chartered Institute of Journalists. Derek is originally from Scotland although he currently lives in the Netherlands.
